PROFESSIONAL NETWORK FOR WOMEN IN PROCUREMENT

The Let's Network – Women in Procurement group was founded in 2016 creating a professional network for women in procurement.

The Patron and Chair is Susan Riley, Procurement Australia Board Member and Councillor, City of Melbourne.

The aim of the group is to bring together senior procurement women from member organisations around Australia, the network seeks to develop professional skills and expertise, and encourage and mentor up and coming women in the procurement field.

Meetings define and discuss contemporary issues and challenges, share learnings, and light the way for future successful female procurement specialists.

Work issues will be identified and dissected along with the challenges women in procurement face.

For more information please email events@procurementaustralia.com.au

‘Our goal is to develop a collaborative and supportive alliance of professional women in the procurement industry, to define and discuss contemporary issues, share learnings and light the way for future successful procurement specialists.

Importantly the desire is for the network to be highly engaging and for network members be empowered and supported.
